1. The large former mill at Dzierzoniow (Reichenbach) is now used for storing uranium ore. The building is surrounded by a wall three meters high, and barbed wire. A watchtower is located at each corner, and armed Soviet soldiers are on guard.
2. The uranium ore, which comes from the Walbrzych region, is brought to the Dzierzoniow storehouse in metal cases of one cubic meter capacity. Here it is loaded into smaller cases which are transported by truck in the direction of Kamieniec Zabkowicki (Kamezn). The convoys are escorted by Soviet soldiers.
3. Former German prisoners of war and German women are employed at the storehouse. They are quartered in the area and are not permitted to leave their billets.
4. All transports of uranium ore are assembled by the Russians at Zabkowice (Q51/Y78) for forwarding to the USSR.
